surprised when he said that and then he mentioned the time we were on holiday and I did not pay for any of the meals. I was shocked at what they thought about me and I had completely forgotten that I did not pay that night and that I did not have change. I felt very guilty about it. This was the reason they had not contacted me for a few weeks.

I was fortunate that they still treated me as a good friend and I learnt a very important lesson for my future.

Today we are still very good friends. We still talk a lot like before and are open minded and do not hold back our opinions. However we are not like teenagers, we are maturer and do not try to impose our opinions on others. We are also more forgiving of other people's faults. I hope that we can keep this friendship forever.

The friendships we build during our childhood are not the same as the ones we develop as adults. When we are maturer we are more careful and consider more of what other people will think of us and so we behave better. The friendships we have as children are innocent, truer and sincere.

Maybe as we grow up we change, but when we meet each other we will remember when we were little and how happy we were. Thus we do not put on a mask, but still act the same as when we were young. If you make a mistake your friends will forgive you, but when you are older, your friends might still remember what you did and though they will still say hello to you they will keep a certain distance from you.

Sometimes you cannot expect everyone to like you and treat you like a good friend. It takes time until they trust you and then they will be more open to you. Some people are afraid of being taken advantage of by others. Of course, there are people who like to take advantage of others as well and so we learn how to protect ourselves as we get older.

If one day we can all be friends, trust each other and forgive each other's faults then we will not have to wear masks anymore.
